Dear staff, students, parents and caregivers,

What a first week back this has been! There was a buzz in the air as we travelled between schools ... kids eager to see friends, students immediately able to lean on the supports our schools offer, and staff collaborating across departments and across the district. It was a beautiful reminder of what will happen as we get to shift more focus to the learning and lessons of the year ahead.

As we reflect on the coming school year, it's also a great opportunity to consider the foundation this year will be built on: the remarkable school year of 2020-21. Not only did we navigate the most challenging health crisis most of us have ever seen, but we did so while continuing to deliver on our commitments to students, staff and families. From opening our new high school, to advancing our commitments around racism, diversity and inclusion; from the big milestones in our efforts to improve our Inclusive Education practices, to the staff who shone for their commitment, passion and innovation. We achieved a lot of amazing things, while we supported the learning, social-emotional and other needs of our students, staff and community.

We encourage you take a few minutes to review the historic year in our annual "Good things are happening: 2020-21 in review" report: <https://newwestschools.ca/good-things-are-happening-2020-21-in-review/>

The feature highlights what we know: good things are not only possible, they are happening here in New Westminister. It's the collective commitment and hard work of the staff, students and community that is driving this work. And that's what I'm so proud to be part of.

We're not done. More is happening all the time.
